Dear Job Master

I want to establish myself as a promising and motivated entry level qa engineer. Having studied the company's activities and requirements, I am sure that our visions are aligned.

I am always devoted to progressing mutual goals, which affects the quality of my performance and engagement. Engineering allows me to develop and implement new workable technological solutions for process optimization. I always apply problem-solving at the initial stage of idea development to understand which solution will cover the need in the best way and thus will hit the target. The ability to work under pressure helps me avoid overreacting, stay calm and productive in stressful situations.

I understand that a good entry level qa engineer is primarily a flexible specialist, ready to adapt to the environment and circumstances. However, there are several unchanged components of my activity, namely planning, teamwork, collaboration. You can see their effectiveness in the process of cooperation.

I am sure that the right employee always has something to offer. In this regard, I hope that Dear Job Master will find a use for my idea exchange, planning, prioritizing skills.

If you require more information, please don't hesitate to contact me.

Sincerely,

Naveen Sharma
